Science & the Bible A Seminar with Dr. Robert Newman

28-29 March 2008

About the Speaker

Robert C. Newman is Professor of New Testament and Christian Evidences at the Biblical Theological Seminary of Hatfield, Pennsylvania and Director of the Interdisciplinary Biblical Research Institute. He is a frequent speaker at churches and colleges on evidences for the truth of Christianity and on the interaction between science and the Bible. Dr. Newman is especially qualified to speak in these areas. As a theologian he has earned the degrees of Master of Divinity and Master of Sacred Theology. He has done further graduate work in religious thought at the University of Pennsylvania, in biblical geography at the Institute of Holy Land Studies (now Jerusalem University College), and in biblical interpretation at Westminster Theological Seminary. He is a past President of the Evangelical Theological Society, a professional society of nearly 3000 theologians.

In the field of science, Dr. Newman received his undergraduate degree in physics from Duke University and his doctorate in theoretical astrophysics from Cornell University. He has done scientific research for the U.S. Weather Bureau and the Franklin Institute.

Dr. Newman is co-author of five books: Science Speaks, Genesis One and the Origin of the Earth, The Evidence of Prophecy, and What's Darwin Got to Do With It? A Friendly Conversation on Evolution, and The Biblical Firmament: Vault or Vapor? He has also published a number of articles in Christian magazines, scientific and theological journals, dictionaries, and multi-author books.

Dr. Newman is a native of Arlington, Virginia, and a resident of North Garden, Virginia.
